

1. What is maintenance?
 - c. The continued occurrence of a behavior even after the behavior program has been completed.
2. Generalization is:
 - b. When skills are used across different settings, situations, or responses.
3. TRUE or FALSE: Generalization across settings is when an individual uses the skills learned in settings outside of the instructional setting.
 - a. True
4. An example of generalization across skills is:
 - b. When an individual is taught how to pay for groceries with cash, they might use a check or credit card on the next visit.
5. Which of the following are strategies used to program for generalization?
 - c. Specify each of the settings and situations where they skill might be needed and increase skill flexibility for each possible setting.